⚡ Executive Summary

Alex, your profile is exceptionally strong for college soccer recruitment, especially at the NCAA Division I level. Playing in MLS NEXT as a key starter with outstanding individual statistics and recognition like 'All-American' puts you in the top echelon of recruits. Your high athletic and technical self-assessments, coupled with a solid academic record, make you attractive to a wide range of programs. You've already started to generate interest and received an offer, indicating your market value. The key now is to refine your target list, ensure academic alignment with your top choices, and continue to perform at your elite level while managing your recruitment actively.

FUNNEL DIAGNOSIS

Actively engage with programs of interest, schedule visits, and clearly communicate your preferences to coaches to narrow down and optimize your offers.

ACADEMIC ALIGNMENT

Your 3.6 GPA is 'Solid Academic', which is excellent, but it means some of the most academically selective D1 programs might be a stretch, potentially narrowing your top-tier D1 options compared to peers with higher GPAs.

⚠ WARNING

EARLY RECRUITMENT PACE

As a 2026 graduate, you are still relatively young in the recruitment cycle. While having an offer is fantastic, some top D1 programs may prefer to evaluate physical maturity and continued development closer to your senior year, meaning some top options might not be actively recruiting your class yet.

ⓘ OPTIMIZATION

MARKET STRATEGY

While you have an an offer and a good response rate, with 25 contacts made, you should be strategically expanding your outreach to ensure you're exploring the full breadth of D1 opportunities and finding the absolute best fit, not just the first offer.
